

FOR LAW AND PUBLIC POLICY

BOSTON COLLEGE
SCHOOL OF LAW

I have always believed in the power and responsibility of government to improve people's lives. I wanted to contribute to that work.

Chris McDonough

Chris McDonough: Natural Fit

There are days, Chris McDonough admits, that the law school grind isn't exactly ideal for a young family.

Sometimes, amidst those miserable long hours of studying, the idea of job, working from home, and the accompanying layer of financial security for Chris, his wife Joanna, and the daughter Lucy, seemed darned good.

But it's a fleeting thought, one that invariably gives way to recent memory of his Rappaport summer and the certainty that he's just where he is supposed to be.

"You know, actually, I liked my old career, it would be way, way easier to have two salaries right now," said the 32-year-old. "But this summer reaffirmed this: this is what I want to be doing."